

Psalms 107:25

Authorized King James Version (KJV)

For he commandeth, and raiseth the stormy wind, which lifteth up the waves thereof.

Analysis

---

This verse describes God's sovereignty over storms. 'For he commandeth, and raiseth the stormy wind' shows God's active control over weather. 'Commandeth' (amar, אָמַר) means He speaks, and it happens. 'Raiseth' (amad, אָמַד) means to cause to stand or arise. 'Stormy wind' (ruach searah, רוּחַ סַעָרָה) is tempest or hurricane-force wind. 'Which lifteth up the waves thereof' describes waves rising to terrifying heights. God's word controls storms—He commands and they arise. This demonstrates absolute sovereignty over nature. What terrifies humans obeys God instantly. The same power that speaks storms into existence can speak them into calm.

Historical Context

Throughout Scripture, God controls weather: flood (Genesis 6-7), plagues on Egypt, Red Sea parting, storm in Jonah 1, Jesus calming the storm (Mark 4:39). God asks Job, 'Hath the rain a father? or who hath begotten the drops of dew?...Out of whose womb came the ice?' (Job 38:28-29). Weather reveals God's sovereignty and humanity's dependence. Climate isn't autonomous but subject to divine command.
