

Psalm 107:29

Authorized King James Version (KJV)

He maketh the storm a calm, so that the waves thereof are still.

Analysis

This verse describes God's deliverance from storm. 'He maketh the storm a calm' shows instant transformation. 'Maketh' (qum, מְקֻם) means He causes to stand or establishes—He institutes calm. 'Storm' becomes 'calm' (demamah, דְּמַמָּה), meaning silence, whisper, or stillness—the same word for 'still small voice' after Elijah's storm (1 Kings 19:12). 'So that the waves thereof are still' uses chashak (חַשָּׁק), meaning hushed or quieted. The raging chaos becomes peaceful quiet. This demonstrates divine authority over creation's fury. Jesus' command 'Peace, be still' (Mark 4:39) echoes this—creation obeys the Creator's word instantly.

Historical Context

Jesus calming the storm fulfilled this pattern (Matthew 8:23-27; Mark 4:35-41; Luke 8:22-25). The disciples marveled: 'What manner of man is this, that even the winds and the sea obey him?' The answer: He's the Creator whose word commands nature. For storm-tossed disciples and later storm-experiencing church, this demonstrated Jesus' divine power and availability in crisis. God's storm-calming continues figuratively—He brings peace to life's chaotic circumstances.
