

Psalms 107:3

Authorized King James Version (KJV)

And gathered them out of the lands, from the east, and from the west, from the north, and from the south.

Analysis

This verse describes gathering from geographical dispersion. 'And gathered them out of the lands' refers to exiles returning from various nations. 'From the east, and from the west, from the north, and from the south' uses four directions to indicate universal gathering from all places of scattering. The Hebrew actually says 'from the sea' (yam, יָם) instead of 'south,' indicating comprehensive gathering from all directions. This prophetically points to the gathering of God's people from all nations (Isaiah 43:5-6; Matthew 8:11). The physical gathering from exile prefigures the spiritual gathering of elect from every tribe, tongue, and nation (Revelation 7:9).

Historical Context

The Babylonian exile scattered Jews to various regions of the empire. Return under Zerubbabel, Ezra, and Nehemiah brought back a remnant, though most remained in dispersion. This verse celebrates the beginning of restoration, though complete gathering awaited future fulfillment. Isaiah prophesied more comprehensive gathering (Isaiah 11:11-12; 27:12-13; 43:5-7). Jesus referenced gathering 'from the four winds' (Matthew 24:31). The church now experiences this as elect are gathered from all nations.
