

Psalms 109:2

Authorized King James Version (KJV)

For the mouth of the wicked and the mouth of the deceitful are opened against me: they have spoken against me with a lying tongue.

Analysis

For the mouth of the wicked and the mouth of the deceitful are opened against me—The Hebrew פִּי רָשָׁע וּפִי־מִרְמָה (pi rasha ufi-mirmah) emphasizes dual sources of opposition: the openly wicked and the deliberately deceptive. David faces coordinated slander, not isolated criticism. They have spoken against me with a lying tongue (לִשׁוֹן שֶׁקֶר, leshon sheker)—the tongue of falsehood, which Proverbs lists among the seven abominations God hates (Prov 6:16-19).

This verse establishes the psalm's context: David suffers not from honest disagreement but from malicious fabrication. The imprecatory prayers that follow (vv. 6-19) respond to covenant-breaking treachery, not personal offense. Christ experienced this same betrayal from Judas and false witnesses (Matt 26:59-60), making Psalm 109 messianic in application—Peter cited verse 8 regarding Judas's replacement (Acts 1:20).

Historical Context

Traditionally attributed to David during Absalom's rebellion or conflicts with Saul's loyalists. Ancient Near Eastern treaty curses similarly invoked divine judgment on covenant-breakers. The psalm's severity reflects covenant theology: those who betray God's anointed invite the covenant curses of Deuteronomy 28.

Study Questions

1. How do you distinguish between criticism that deserves humble response versus slander that requires firm resistance?
2. When falsely accused, how does David's resort to prayer (v. 4) rather than retaliation model Christ-like response?
3. What does coordinated deception reveal about spiritual warfare beyond merely human opposition?
