

Psalms 109:22

Authorized King James Version (KJV)

For I am poor and needy, and my heart is wounded within me.

Analysis

For I am poor and needy, and my heart is wounded within me. David declares his condition using ani (אֲנִי, poor/afflicted) and evyon (עָבִיּוֹן, needy), terms denoting socioeconomic vulnerability but primarily spiritual destitution. The phrase my heart is wounded uses chalal (חָלַל), meaning pierced or slain, describing trauma deeper than physical suffering.

This self-description grounds David's imprecatory prayers (verses 6-19) in genuine affliction, not vindictive spite. The wounded heart reveals emotional and spiritual anguish—betrayal by a trusted friend (verse 4) has left him psychologically devastated. This parallels Christ's experience, who quoted this psalm (verse 8 in Acts 1:20) and knew intimate betrayal by Judas.

The poverty David describes transcends material lack, encompassing complete dependence on God for vindication and deliverance. Like the anawim (the humble poor) throughout Scripture, David positions himself as one who has nowhere to turn but to God's mercy. This spiritual poverty anticipates Jesus's beatitude: "Blessed are the poor in spirit" (Matthew 5:3).

Historical Context

Psalms 109 is a lament psalm attributed to David, likely written during Absalom's rebellion or another period of betrayal by trusted associates. The imprecatory nature (cursing enemies) was understood as calling for divine justice, not personal revenge, within Israel's covenant framework. The early church recognized this psalm as messianic, seeing David's betrayal as typological of Christ's betrayal by Judas.
