

Psalms 115:15

Authorized King James Version (KJV)

Ye are blessed of the LORD which made heaven and earth.

Analysis

Ye are blessed of the LORD which made heaven and earth. The blessing concludes by grounding divine favor in divine identity. Blessed of the LORD (berukhim atem l'Yahweh, בָּרוּכִים אַתֶּם לְיהוָה uses the passive participle, indicating a settled state: you ARE blessed, not merely you will receive blessing. It's identity before activity, being before doing.

The phrase which made heaven and earth (oseh shamayim va'aretz, עֹשֶׂה שָׁמָיִם וְאָرֶץ) is foundational. The Creator of all things can certainly bless His people. This title appears in the Bible's first verse (Genesis 1:1) and in Abrahamic encounters (Genesis 14:19, 22). It distinguishes Yahweh from territorial or limited deities. Pagan gods ruled specific domains (sea, war, fertility), but Israel's God created and rules all.

The logic is irrefutable: if God made heaven and earth, He owns them (Psalm 24:1). If He owns all, He can dispose of all as He wills. If He chooses to bless His people, no force in heaven or earth can prevent it. Idol gods 'made by hands' are impotent; the God who made hands is omnipotent.

Historical Context

The creation confession ('maker of heaven and earth') was Israel's primary apologetic against pagan polytheism. Babylonian religion credited creation to multiple gods emerging from primordial chaos (Enuma Elish). Canaanite religion divided cosmic control among the pantheon. Israel's radical monotheism claimed one God spoke all things into existence. This confession distinguished true religion from false, the living God from dead idols. It became the creedal foundation: Apostles' Creed and Nicene Creed both begin 'I believe in God the Father Almighty, Maker of heaven and earth.'

Study Questions

1. How does understanding yourself as 'blessed' (present tense, settled identity) rather than merely 'hoping to be blessed' change your spiritual posture?
2. What practical difference does it make that the God who blesses you is the same God who created everything?
3. How might regularly confessing God as 'maker of heaven and earth' guard against functional atheism (living as if He has limited power or authority)?
