

Psalm 118:27

Authorized King James Version (KJV)

God is the LORD, which hath shewed us light: bind the sacrifice with cords, even unto the horns of the altar.

Analysis

God is the LORD, which hath shewed us light (אֱלֹהֵינוּ יְהוָה יְמָנֵנוּ, El YHWH vayyaer lanu)—El means God, mighty one; or means light, illumination. Bind the sacrifice with cords, even unto the horns of the altar (אִסְרֹרֶת בְּעֵבֶתִים עַד־קָרְנוֹת) (אִסְרֹרֶת הַמִּזְבֵּחַ, isru-chag ba'avotim ad-karnot hamizbe'ach)—Asar means bind, tie; chag means festival sacrifice; keren means horn (the corners of the altar); mizbe'ach means altar.

This verse is complex. "God is the LORD" uses both El and YHWH, emphasizing divine identity. "Shewed us light" means revelation, guidance, salvation (Psalm 27:1). The command to bind the sacrifice may refer to tying animals securely for slaughter, or symbolically binding oneself to the altar in dedication. Christians see Christ as the ultimate sacrifice bound to the altar-cross, illuminating humanity with salvation's light.

Historical Context

The altar had four horns at its corners where blood was applied (Exodus 29:12, Leviticus 4:7). The most holy sacrifices were offered there. This psalm's liturgy accompanied festival processions bringing sacrifices. The emphasis on light connects to Tabernacles' lamp-lighting ceremony, when Jesus declared, "I am the light of the world" (John 8:12).

Study Questions

1. How does God showing light connect to Christ as "light of the world" who reveals God?
2. What does it mean to bind yourself to God's altar as a living sacrifice (Romans 12:1)?
3. How do the altar's horns (representing power/strength) relate to Christ's sacrifice empowering salvation?
