

Psalms 119:11

Authorized King James Version (KJV)

Thy word have I hid in mine heart, that I might not sin against thee.

Analysis

The Hebrew 'tsaphan' (hid) suggests treasuring or storing up, not concealment from others. Hiding God's Word 'in the heart' (leb—the inner person, including mind and will) means deep internalization through memorization and meditation. The purpose clause 'that I might not sin against thee' reveals Scripture's sanctifying function (John 17:17; Ephesians 5:26). This verse embodies the psalmist's strategy for holiness: preventive rather than merely corrective. Christ exemplified this principle by wielding Scripture against Satan's temptations (Matthew 4:4, 7, 10). The verse assumes God's Word as the objective standard for righteousness.

Historical Context

Psalms 119, the longest chapter in the Bible, is an elaborate acrostic celebrating God's torah. Each eight-verse section corresponds to a Hebrew letter. Written during Israel's Second Temple period, it reflects the centrality of written Scripture in Jewish piety and the post-exilic emphasis on covenant faithfulness through law observance.
