

Psalms 119:58

Authorized King James Version (KJV)

I intreated thy favour with my whole heart: be merciful unto me according to thy word.

Analysis

---

I intreated thy favour with my whole heart: be merciful unto me according to thy word. The verb intreated (חִלִּיתִי, chilliti) means 'sought earnestly' or 'implored,' carrying intensity and urgency. Thy favour (פָּנֶיךָ, panekha)—literally 'thy face'—suggests seeking God's presence, not merely His gifts. Moses prayed similarly: 'Show me your glory' (Exodus 33:18).

With my whole heart (בְּכָל-לֵב, bekol-lev) emphasizes undivided devotion—the same wholehearted commitment required in the Shema (Deuteronomy 6:5). The petition be merciful unto me according to thy word grounds the request in God's revealed promises, not human merit. This anticipates Hebrews 4:16: 'Let us come boldly to the throne of grace.'

Historical Context

Seeking God's face was central to covenant relationship. The Aaronic blessing pronounced God's face shining upon Israel (Numbers 6:25). Conversely, God hiding His face signified judgment (Deuteronomy 31:17). The temple represented God's dwelling where His face could be sought, making exile devastating—separated from God's manifest presence. Yet this verse affirms that God's word remains accessible even when His temple is distant.

Study Questions

1. Do your prayers primarily seek God's face (His presence) or merely His hand (His blessings)?
2. What might 'wholehearted' prayer look like practically—how can you eliminate distraction and half-heartedness?
3. How does grounding prayer in God's promises ('according to thy word') provide confidence without presumption?
