

Psalms 119:60

Authorized King James Version (KJV)

I made haste, and delayed not to keep thy commandments.

Analysis

I made haste, and delayed not to keep thy commandments. The pairing made haste (חָשַׁתִּי, chashti) and delayed not (וְלֹא הִתְמַהְמַהְתִּי, velo hitmahmahti) creates emphatic urgency—no procrastination, no hesitation. Following verse 59's repentance, this verse demonstrates that genuine conviction produces immediate obedience. The verb delayed (מָהַח, mahah) is used of Lot's hesitation to flee Sodom (Genesis 19:16), illustrating the danger of spiritual dithering.

This urgency contrasts worldly procrastination—Felix's 'convenient season' that never came (Acts 24:25), Agrippa's 'almost persuaded' (Acts 26:28). The gospel demands immediate response: 'Today, if you hear His voice, do not harden your hearts' (Hebrews 3:15). Delayed obedience is disobedience. Speed in obeying God demonstrates that faith is real and alive.

Historical Context

Israel's history warned against delayed obedience. The generation that refused immediate entry into Canaan wandered 40 years in wilderness (Numbers 14). Saul's delayed obedience in destroying Amalek cost him the kingdom (1 Samuel 15). In contrast, Abraham's immediate willingness to sacrifice Isaac demonstrated genuine faith (Genesis 22). Jesus's parables often warned against presuming on time—the foolish virgins, the rich farmer storing crops.

Study Questions

1. What specific obedience to God's Word have you been postponing, and what rationalizations sustain the delay?
2. How can you cultivate the spiritual reflex of immediate obedience when conviction comes, before rationalization sets in?
3. In what areas of life might 'delayed obedience' actually be disobedience disguised as prudence?
