

Psalms 119:7

Authorized King James Version (KJV)

I will praise thee with uprightness of heart, when I shall have learned thy righteous judgments.

Analysis

---

I will praise thee with uprightness of heart, when I shall have learned thy righteous judgments. This verse concludes the Beth (ב) stanza of the alphabetic acrostic. Uprightness of heart (yosher levav, יָשֵׁר לְבָב) signifies moral integrity and sincerity—not merely correct external worship but authentic inner devotion. The psalmist links praise to learning, suggesting that deeper understanding of God's righteous judgments (mishpatei tzidqekha, מִשְׁפָּטִים צִדְקָה) naturally produces heartfelt worship.

The future tense I will praise (odekha, אֹהֵדך) expresses resolve and anticipation. As the psalmist progressively learns God's statutes, praise will increasingly flow from a heart aligned with divine truth. This anticipates the New Testament teaching that worship must be in spirit and truth (John 4:24), grounded in genuine knowledge of God's character and ways.

Historical Context

Psalm 119 is an elaborate acrostic poem, with eight verses for each of the 22 Hebrew letters. Verses 1-8 begin with Aleph (א), verses 9-16 with Beth (ב), and so forth. This intricate structure aided memorization and demonstrated the comprehensive nature of God's Word—covering the entire alphabet, so to speak. The psalm likely served as a teaching tool in Second Temple Judaism, emphasizing Torah meditation as the pathway to wisdom and covenant faithfulness.

Study Questions

1. How does growing knowledge of Scripture shape your worship—do you find that deeper biblical understanding leads to more authentic praise?
2. What is the relationship between 'uprightness of heart' and external religious practices in your own life?
3. In what ways might you be offering God worship that lacks the foundation of learning His righteous judgments?
