

Psalms 122:1

Authorized King James Version (KJV)

I was glad when they said unto me, Let us go into the house of the LORD.

Analysis

---

David's joy at the prospect of worship is palpable: 'I was glad when they said unto me, Let us go into the house of the LORD.' The Hebrew 'samachti' (I was glad) conveys deep, exuberant joy - not mere obligation or routine but enthusiastic delight. The plural 'they said' indicates corporate worship; faith thrives in community, not isolation. The phrase 'house of the LORD' refers to the tabernacle in David's time (the temple would be built by Solomon), representing God's dwelling among His people. This verse establishes that authentic worship flows from heartfelt joy, not compulsion. The call to worship originates from fellow believers, demonstrating the church's role in stirring affection for God. True worship begins with glad anticipation, not grudging compliance.

Historical Context

David established Jerusalem as Israel's political and religious capital, bringing the ark of the covenant to the city (2 Samuel 6). Though David couldn't build the temple (2 Chronicles 6:7-9), he made extensive preparations for it and instituted worship practices. This psalm reflects the joy of pilgrims approaching Jerusalem for the annual feasts, a practice that would continue for centuries.
