

Psalm 127:1

Authorized King James Version (KJV)

Except the LORD build the house, they labour in vain that build it: except the LORD keep the city, the watchman waketh but in vain.

Analysis

Solomon's wisdom psalm establishes divine sovereignty over human endeavors through parallel declarations: God must build the house, God must keep the city, or human labor is 'vain' (shav—empty, worthless). This isn't a call to passivity but recognition that apart from God's blessing, even diligent work proves futile (John 15:5). The verse applies to literal construction, family building (verses 3-5), and all human enterprises. It echoes the foundational truth that 'in him we live, and move, and have our being' (Acts 17:28) and anticipates Christ's teaching about abiding in the vine for fruitfulness.

Historical Context

This 'Song of Ascents' (sung by pilgrims traveling to Jerusalem for feasts) attributed to Solomon likely reflects on the temple construction. Solomon learned through experience that wisdom, wealth, and labor apart from God lead to emptiness (Ecclesiastes 2:11). The verse became proverbial in Israel's wisdom tradition.
