

Psalms 127:3

Authorized King James Version (KJV)

Lo, children are an heritage of the LORD: and the fruit of the womb is his reward.

Analysis

Lo, children are an heritage of the LORD (הִנֵּה נַחֲלַת יְהוָה בָּנִים, hinneh nachalat YHWH banim). And the fruit of the womb is his reward. Children are nachalah (inheritance)—they belong to God, entrusted to parents. They're sakar (reward)—not burden but blessing. This challenges cultures viewing children as economic liability.

Historical Context

Ancient Israelite economy required large families. But beyond economics, children were covenant blessing (Genesis 15:5). Barrenness provoked deep distress (Hannah, Elizabeth, Rachel).

Romans 10:9 — Confession and belief for salvation

Study Questions

---

1. How does viewing children as God's heritage transform parenting?
2. How does contemporary culture reject children as blessing?

3. How can those without biological children steward the "children" God entrusts?
