

Psalms 128:5

Authorized King James Version (KJV)

The LORD shall bless thee out of Zion: and thou shalt see the good of Jerusalem all the days of thy life.

Analysis

The blessing extends beyond personal to communal: 'The LORD shall bless thee out of Zion: and thou shalt see the good of Jerusalem all the days of thy life.' The phrase 'out of Zion' connects personal blessing to God's presence in the temple/Jerusalem. Zion represents where God dwells among His people; blessing flows from God's presence and covenant relationship. Personal flourishing (vv. 2-3) is inseparable from participation in covenant community. The promise 'thou shalt see the good of Jerusalem' means witnessing the holy city's prosperity, peace, and thriving. The individual's welfare is bound to the community's welfare. The temporal phrase 'all the days of thy life' extends blessing across the entire lifespan - not momentary but sustained throughout one's years. This verse prevents individualism by linking personal blessing to corporate health.

Historical Context

Jerusalem/Zion was Israel's religious and political center - God's dwelling place and the nation's capital. Individual Israelites' prosperity depended partly on national stability, temple worship continuity, and covenant community health. The exile demonstrated how individual and corporate fortunes were intertwined. For pilgrims singing this psalm, seeing Jerusalem's good was tangible evidence of God's blessing.
