

Psalm 132:11

Authorized King James Version (KJV)

The LORD hath sworn in truth unto David; he will not turn from it; Of the fruit of thy body will I set upon thy throne.

Analysis

God's sworn covenant is quoted: 'The LORD hath sworn in truth unto David; he will not turn from it; Of the fruit of thy body will I set upon thy throne.' This verse begins divine response to the prayer (vv. 8-10). The phrase 'hath sworn in truth' emphasizes certainty and irrevocability - God's oath is absolutely reliable. 'In truth' means with faithfulness, reliability. The assurance 'he will not turn from it' promises permanence - God won't change His mind or revoke the covenant. The content 'of the fruit of thy body will I set upon thy throne' promises dynastic succession through David's biological descendants. 'Fruit of thy body' emphasizes David's own offspring, not adopted heirs. This quotes/summarizes 2 Samuel 7:12-16, Nathan's prophecy establishing Davidic covenant. The emphasis on God's unchanging oath provides foundation for confidence.

Historical Context

The Davidic covenant (2 Samuel 7; 1 Chronicles 17; Psalm 89) became foundation for Israel's hope. Despite exile and apparent dynastic failure, prophets promised restoration through David's line (Isaiah 9:6-7; 11:1-10; Jeremiah 23:5-6; 33:14-26; Ezekiel 34:23-24; 37:24-25). Christians see ultimate fulfillment in Christ, David's son who reigns eternally (Luke 1:32-33; Acts 2:29-36).
