

Psalms 135:18

Authorized King James Version (KJV)

They that make them are like unto them: so is every one that trusteth in them.

Analysis

The idol polemic reaches devastating conclusion: 'They that make them are like unto them: so is every one that trusteth in them.' This principle of spiritual conformity runs throughout Scripture - we become like what we worship. Idol makers share their idols' spiritual deadness: blind, deaf, mute, breathless in any spiritual sense. The Hebrew construction emphasizes exact correspondence: 'like them' (kemohem). Those who trust (batach) in idols place their confidence in emptiness and receive emptiness in return. Romans 1:21-23 develops this theme, showing how rejecting the Creator leads to degraded thinking and worship of created things. The positive corollary appears in 2 Corinthians 3:18: beholding the Lord's glory, believers 'are changed into the same image.' We are transformed into the likeness of whatever commands our deepest trust and devotion. This makes the choice of worship objects eternally consequential.

Historical Context

The principle of becoming like what one worships was understood in ancient religion, where worshipers sought to embody their deity's characteristics through imitation. Israel's prophets turned this insight into judgment: those who worship nothing become nothing. This psychological and spiritual insight anticipates modern observations about how devotion shapes character.
