

Psalms 140:7

Authorized King James Version (KJV)

O GOD the Lord, the strength of my salvation, thou hast covered my head in the day of battle.

Analysis

O GOD the Lord, the strength of my salvation, thou hast covered my head in the day of battle. David addresses God with emphatic title: "O GOD the Lord" (YHWH Adonai, אֱלֹהִים אֱלֹהִים)—combining God's covenant name (YHWH, יְהֹוָה) with title of sovereign lordship (Adonai, אֲדֹנָה). This double address emphasizes both intimate covenant relationship and supreme authority. Only this powerful, covenant-keeping God can deliver from such fierce enemies.

"The strength of my salvation" (oz yeshu'ati, עֹז יְשׁוּעָתִי) identifies God as source and power of deliverance. Oz (עֹז, "strength, might, power") emphasizes capability. Yeshu'ah (יְשׁוּעָה, "salvation") is deliverance, victory, rescue. The possessive "my salvation" personalizes it—God isn't abstract deliverer but David's personal savior. The phrase anticipates Isaiah 12:2: "the LORD JEHOVAH is my strength and my song; he also is become my salvation," and ultimately points to Jesus (Yeshua in Hebrew), whose name means "Yahweh saves."

"Thou hast covered my head in the day of battle" (sakota le-roshi be-yom neshek, סָקַתָּה לְרָאשִׁי בְּיּוֹם נֶשֶׁק) recalls specific past deliverance. Sakak (סָקַתָּה, "covered") means "to cover, screen, protect"—like a shield protecting vulnerable head from weapons. Rosh (רָאשׁ, "head") is the most vital target in battle; protecting the head preserves life. Yom neshek (יּוֹם נֶשֶׁק, "day of battle") literally means "day of weapons/armor"—time of armed conflict. David testifies that in actual combat situations, God supernaturally protected him from mortal wounds. This wasn't metaphorical but literal—arrows, spears, and swords missed or failed to cause fatal injury because God intervened.

Historical Context

David's military career provided abundant examples of God's battlefield protection. As young shepherd, he killed lion and bear defending his flock (1 Samuel 17:34-37). Facing Goliath, he declared: "the LORD saveth not with sword and spear: for the battle is the LORD's" (1 Samuel 17:47), then defeated the giant with sling and stone. Throughout his years as warrior and king, David fought numerous battles—against Philistines, Moabites, Arameans, Edomites, Ammonites, and Amalekites (1 Samuel-2 Samuel). He survived assassination attempts, battles where enemies outnumbered him, and rebellions from within his own kingdom. The fact that David lived to old age despite decades of warfare and constant danger testified to supernatural protection. This established the pattern: God preserves His anointed through overwhelming opposition, a pattern fulfilled perfectly in Christ who conquered death itself (Acts 2:24).

Study Questions

1. What does it mean that God is 'the strength of my salvation' rather than merely a helper in salvation?
2. How does David's testimony that God 'covered my head in the day of battle' encourage believers facing spiritual warfare (Ephesians 6:12-17)?

3. How does God's protection of David through literal battlefields assure believers of His protection through spiritual battles against sin, Satan, and death?
