

Psalm 145:10

Authorized King James Version (KJV)

All thy works shall praise thee, O LORD; and thy saints shall bless thee.

Analysis

All thy works shall praise thee, O LORD; and thy saints shall bless thee.

Creation's universal worship—kol-ma'aseka (כל-מְעַשֵּׁךְ) "all your works"—includes both conscious praise from rational creatures and unconscious testimony from all creation. Romans 1:20 affirms that creation declares God's eternal power and divine nature. The phrase echoes Psalm 19:1, "The heavens declare the glory of God."

Thy saints shall bless thee (vachasideka yēbarekukha, צָהָסִידִים יְבָרֶכְךָ "saints/godly ones" are those who have received and reflect God's chesed (חסֵד) "covenant love." While all creation unconsciously praises, the redeemed consciously and intentionally bless their Redeemer. This anticipates Revelation 5:13 where every creature joins the Lamb's worship.

Historical Context

The distinction between general creation-witness and particular saint-worship reflected Israel's understanding of their unique calling. All nations saw God's glory in creation (Psalm 19:1-4), but only Israel (and those joined to her) knew Him personally through covenant revelation. This foreshadowed the church's role as conscious worshipers among unconscious creation.
