

Psalm 145:12

Authorized King James Version (KJV)

To make known to the sons of men his mighty acts, and the glorious majesty of his kingdom.

Analysis

To make known to the sons of men his mighty acts, and the glorious majesty of his kingdom. The purpose clause (lēhodi'a, לְהֹדִיעַ "to make known") reveals why believers speak of God's kingdom: to inform bēnei ha'adam (בְּנֵי הָאָדָם) "the sons of men/humanity" about divine realities they wouldn't otherwise know. God's gēvurotav (גְּבוּרֹתָיו) "mighty acts" in history testify to His present power.

The glorious majesty of his kingdom (kavod hadar malkhuto, כָּבוֹד הָדָר מֶלֶכְתּוֹ) again piles synonyms—kavod "glory," hadar "majesty/splendor"—to express God's kingdom's incomparable magnificence. This evangelistic thrust shows that proclamation serves divine purposes: making God's character and reign known to those who suppress or ignore it (Romans 1:18-20).

Historical Context

Israel's calling was to be a light to the nations (Isaiah 42:6, 49:6), making Yahweh known among peoples worshiping false gods. Their testimony about God's mighty acts in the Exodus, conquest, and temple construction was meant to provoke the nations to fear the true God (Joshua 2:9-11, 1 Kings 10:1-9).
