

Psalms 147:2

Authorized King James Version (KJV)

The LORD doth build up Jerusalem: he gathereth together the outcasts of Israel.

Analysis

The LORD doth build up Jerusalem: he gathereth together the outcasts of Israel. The Hebrew verb boneh (בִּנֶה) appears in the present participle, emphasizing ongoing divine action—Yahweh is continually building Jerusalem, not merely once-for-all but perpetually sustaining and restoring His covenant community. This verb echoes God's promise through the prophets to rebuild what exile destroyed (Jeremiah 31:4; Amos 9:11).

The phrase "he gathereth together the outcasts" uses kenasaf nidchei (קִנְסַף נִדְּחֵי), where nidchei means those thrust out, banished, or scattered. Post-exilic Israel knew this reality intimately—physically dispersed among nations, spiritually alienated through covenant unfaithfulness. Yet Yahweh, the covenant-keeping God, actively regathers His people. This gathering anticipates the Messiah's ministry to "the lost sheep of the house of Israel" (Matthew 15:24) and Christ's promise to draw all people to Himself (John 12:32). The church becomes the new Jerusalem, built of living stones gathered from every nation (1 Peter 2:5; Ephesians 2:19-22).

Historical Context

Psalms 147 is a post-exilic hymn, likely composed after Nehemiah's rebuilding of Jerusalem's walls (444 BC). The historical context is crucial: Jerusalem lay in ruins for decades after Babylonian destruction (586 BC). The returned exiles faced enormous challenges—hostile neighbors, economic hardship, ruined infrastructure, spiritual discouragement. Rebuilding the physical city became a sign of God's continuing faithfulness to His covenant promises.
