

Psalms 147:7

Authorized King James Version (KJV)

Sing unto the LORD with thanksgiving; sing praise upon the harp unto our God:

Analysis

Sing unto the LORD with thanksgiving (שִׁירוּ לַיהוָה בְּתוֹדָה)—The imperative shiru commands corporate worship through song, while todah refers to sacrificial thanksgiving, the offering of gratitude for answered prayer. This isn't mere emotional expression but covenantal response to God's faithfulness catalogued in the preceding verses (rebuilding Jerusalem, healing the brokenhearted, numbering the stars).

Sing praise upon the harp (זַמְּרוּ לְאֱלֹהֵינוּ בְּכִנּוֹר)—Zameru means to make music with instrumental accompaniment, specifically the kinnor (lyre/harp), David's instrument. The dual call to vocal and instrumental worship reflects Psalm 33:2-3's pattern: thanksgiving precedes petition, worship precedes request. Notice the progression: YHWH (covenant name) to Elohenu (our God)—personal relationship drives public praise.

Historical Context

Psalm 147 is likely post-exilic (after 539 BC), celebrating Jerusalem's restoration after Babylonian captivity. The harp (kinnor) was central to Temple worship from David's time (1 Chronicles 25), and Psalm 137:2 poignantly records how exiles hung their harps on Babylon's willows, unable to sing. This verse marks the resumption of joyful worship in the rebuilt Temple.
