

Psalms 18:1

Authorized King James Version (KJV)

I will love thee, O LORD, my strength.

Analysis

The superscription identifies this as David's song when delivered from enemies and Saul. The Hebrew 'racham' (love) is intense, visceral affection—literally 'love deeply' or 'have compassion.' David's love for Yahweh flows from experienced salvation. This anticipates the greatest commandment to love God with all your heart (Matthew 22:37) and John's teaching that 'we love because He first loved us' (1 John 4:19). Love responds to grace.

Historical Context

Composed after David's deliverance from years of persecution by Saul and victory over surrounding enemies. Reflects mature faith developed through sustained trials.
