

Psalm 22:11

Authorized King James Version (KJV)

Be not far from me; for trouble is near; for there is none to help.

Analysis

The plea 'be not far from me' reflects the agony of perceived divine distance when 'trouble is near' and 'there is none to help.' This captures Christ's experience on the cross—abandoned by disciples, mocked by crowds, and (for a time) forsaken by the Father. Reformed theology sees this as the nadir of Christ's humiliation: the eternal Son experienced the ultimate loneliness of sin-bearing. His cry of dereliction purchased believers' eternal intimacy with God.

Historical Context

Soldiers about to die in battle would cry similar prayers. For Christ, this plea was fulfilled in the Father's ultimate presence through resurrection (Acts 2:27), turning temporary abandonment into eternal vindication.
