

Psalm 22:15

Authorized King James Version (KJV)

My strength is dried up like a potsherd; and my tongue cleaveth to my jaws; and thou hast brought me into the dust of death.

Analysis

Extreme dehydration ('strength is dried up like a potsherd') and the tongue cleaving to the jaws precisely describe crucifixion's effects. Jesus' cry 'I thirst' (John 19:28) fulfilled this verse. The phrase 'thou hast brought me into the dust of death' asserts God's sovereignty even over Christ's death—it was ordained, not merely permitted. Reformed theology sees divine orchestration: the Father sovereignly planned the Son's death to accomplish redemption.

Historical Context

Potsherds (broken pottery fragments) were completely dry and brittle, illustrating total dehydration. Crucifixion victims died from exposure, blood loss, and asphyxiation after hours of agony. Christ endured this to the fullest extent.
