

Psalm 27:4

Authorized King James Version (KJV)

One thing have I desired of the LORD, that will I seek after; that I may dwell in the house of the LORD all the days of my life, to behold the beauty of the LORD, and to enquire in his temple.

Analysis

David's 'one thing' reveals singular devotion amid life's complexities, echoing Christ's commendation of Mary in Luke 10:42. The threefold purpose—dwelling, beholding, and inquiring—expresses deep longing for God's presence, beauty, and wisdom. The Hebrew 'nô'am' (beauty) suggests pleasantness and graciousness, not merely aesthetic quality. David desires contemplation of God's character and intimate communion, not just external worship. This psalm anticipates the beatific vision (Matthew 5:8; 1 John 3:2) and reflects the chief end of man to glorify God and enjoy Him forever.

Historical Context

Written during a time of danger (verses 2-3), this psalm reflects David's experience of finding sanctuary at the tabernacle. As king, he would later prioritize bringing the ark to Jerusalem, demonstrating his lifelong commitment to God's presence. The temple would become central to Israel's worship life.
