

Psalm 37:11

Authorized King James Version (KJV)

But the meek shall inherit the earth; and shall delight themselves in the abundance of peace.

Analysis

Jesus directly quotes this verse in Matthew 5:5, making it foundational to understanding Kingdom values. 'Meek' (Hebrew 'anav,' humble, afflicted) doesn't mean weakness but strength under God's control—those who refuse self-assertion, trusting God's vindication. Inheriting the earth reverses worldly expectations where the aggressive seize possessions. The phrase 'abundance of peace' (Hebrew 'shalom,' wholeness, completeness) suggests comprehensive flourishing—not merely absence of conflict but positive blessing in all dimensions of life.

Historical Context

Meekness was culturally despised as weakness in honor-based societies. David's elevation of meekness as virtue anticipates Christ's kingdom where divine values invert human hierarchies.

Study Questions

1. How do you practice meekness (strength under control) rather than either aggression or passivity?
2. What would 'abundance of peace' look like in your current circumstances?
