

Psalm 37:19

Authorized King James Version (KJV)

They shall not be ashamed in the evil time: and in the days of famine they shall be satisfied.

Analysis

The 'evil time' and 'days of famine' represent seasons of testing when normal provision fails and circumstances turn hostile. The righteous 'shall not be ashamed' indicates vindication rather than humiliation, their trust proving justified. Being 'satisfied' during famine is supernatural—not abundance but sufficiency when others starve. This recalls Habakkuk 3:17-18: rejoicing in God despite crop failure. Divine provision may not mean excess but always means enough, teaching dependence on God rather than circumstances.

Historical Context

Famine was a recurring threat in ancient agricultural societies, bringing widespread suffering and death. God's promise to satisfy the righteous during such times required miraculous intervention, recalling manna in the wilderness.

Study Questions

1. How do you trust God's provision when economic or personal 'famine' threatens?
2. What does being 'satisfied' mean when circumstances provide less than you desire?
