

Psalms 37:2

Authorized King James Version (KJV)

For they shall soon be cut down like the grass, and wither as the green herb.

Analysis

The metaphor of grass and herbs speaks to transience—what appears vibrant today withers tomorrow. This imagery appears throughout Scripture (Isaiah 40:6-8, James 1:10-11, 1 Peter 1:24) to contrast human temporality with divine permanence. The word 'soon' is relative to God's timing but promises brevity from eternal perspective. This agricultural image would resonate powerfully in ancient agrarian society where grass literally withered rapidly under the Middle Eastern sun, making the comparison visceral and memorable.

Historical Context

Palestinian climate featured rainy and dry seasons. Green vegetation flourished briefly after rains but quickly withered, providing a vivid object lesson about the fleeting nature of the wicked's prosperity.
