

Psalms 37:36

Authorized King James Version (KJV)

Yet he passed away, and, lo, he was not: yea, I sought him, but he could not be found.

Analysis

Yet he passed away, and, lo, he was not (וַיָּעָבֵר וְהִנֵּה אֵינֶנּוּ, vaya'avor ve-hinneh einennu)—Avar (pass away) combined with hinneh (behold!) expresses startling suddenness. Einennu (he was not) echoes Genesis 5:24 but opposite—obliterated, not translated. I sought him, but he could not be found (וָאֲבָקֶשְׁהוּ וְלֹא נִמְצָא, va-avakeshehu ve-lo nimtza)—The disappearance is total and irreversible.

The mighty tree of verse 35 has vanished utterly. History confirms this: Haman hanged (Esther 7:10), Herod eaten by worms (Acts 12:23), empires reduced to ruins. The speed ("yet") emphasizes divine sovereignty over human timelines. What appears permanent can vanish overnight in God's economy.

Historical Context

David witnessed this pattern repeatedly—warriors defeated, conspirators exposed, enemies suddenly falling. Babylon fell in a single night (Daniel 5). Jerusalem's temple, seeming eternal, was destroyed in AD 70 just as Jesus predicted.
