

Psalms 38:1

Authorized King James Version (KJV)

O LORD, rebuke me not in thy wrath: neither chasten me in thy hot displeasure.

Analysis

---

O LORD, rebuke me not in thy wrath: neither chasten me in thy hot displeasure. David opens this penitential psalm (one of seven) with urgent plea—not to escape discipline, but to avoid divine wrath (חֵמָה, chemah, burning fury) versus corrective chastening (יָסַר, yasar, discipline). The covenant name LORD (יְהוָה, YHWH) appeals to God's steadfast love.

The parallel structure—wrath/hot displeasure, rebuke/chasten—intensifies the plea. David distinguishes between a father's loving correction (Hebrews 12:6) and judicial condemnation. His prayer acknowledges deserved judgment while seeking mercy within covenant relationship.

Historical Context

Psalms 38 is a Maschil (instructional psalm) and one of seven penitential psalms (6, 32, 38, 51, 102, 130, 143). The superscription 'to bring to remembrance' suggests liturgical use for memorial offerings. David likely wrote this during illness and social isolation caused by sin, possibly during Absalom's rebellion.

Study Questions

1. How does understanding God's fatherly discipline differ from fearing His judicial wrath change your view of conviction?
2. When you experience consequences of sin, do you appeal to God's covenant love or try to negotiate your way out?
3. What does David's willingness to accept chastening (but not wrath) teach about proper repentance?
