

Psalms 42:3

Authorized King James Version (KJV)

My tears have been my meat day and night, while they continually say unto me, Where is thy God?

Analysis

Tears have become David's 'meat day and night' while enemies continually ask 'Where is thy God?' This mocking question attacks the foundation of faith--if God is real and good, why does He allow such suffering? The image of tears as food suggests grief so overwhelming that it displaces normal sustenance; sorrow consumes everything.

Historical Context

The taunt 'Where is thy God?' echoes throughout Scripture when God's people suffer (Joel 2:17; Micah 7:10). It becomes the central question the psalms of lament address, maintaining faith despite apparent divine absence.

Study Questions

---

1. How do you respond when suffering prompts the question 'Where is your God?'

2. What does it mean that grief can become so consuming that tears replace food?
