

Psalms 44:7

Authorized King James Version (KJV)

But thou hast saved us from our enemies, and hast put them to shame that hated us.

Analysis

Past experience confirms theology: 'Thou hast saved us from our enemies, and hast put them to shame that hated us.' The salvation is attributed entirely to God ('Thou hast'), and the result includes the enemies' public humiliation. Their hatred was answered not merely with defeat but with shame--their opposition to God's people proved futile.

Historical Context

Specific historical references may include various Israelite victories where God intervened miraculously--from the Red Sea crossing to Gideon's victory to Hezekiah's deliverance from Sennacherib.

Study Questions

1. How does remembering past deliverances strengthen faith for present challenges?
2. What does it mean that God 'puts to shame' those who hate His people?
