

Psalms 5:9

Authorized King James Version (KJV)

For there is no faithfulness in their mouth; their inward part is very wickedness; their throat is an open sepulchre; they flatter with their tongue.

Analysis

This verse describes the wicked with surgical precision. 'No faithfulness in their mouth' means unreliable speech. 'Their inward part is very wickedness' uses Hebrew 'hawwah' (destruction/ruin), indicating inner corruption. 'Open sepulchre' (throat) suggests deadly speech that spreads death. 'They flatter with their tongue' shows manipulative deception. Paul quotes this verse in Romans 3:13 as evidence of universal human sinfulness. The progression from internal corruption to external expression shows that speech reveals the heart (Matthew 12:34).

Historical Context

This description fits David's enemies who used smooth words while plotting betrayal - Absalom, Ahithophel, and others. The sepulchre imagery would resonate with Jews who understood ritual uncleanness from contact with death. Early Christians saw this fulfilled in the Pharisees whom Jesus called 'whited sepulchres' (Matthew 23:27).
