

Psalms 56:12

Authorized King James Version (KJV)

Thy vows are upon me, O God: I will render praises unto thee.

Analysis

Vows made to God create covenant obligation. The Hebrew 'neder' (vow) was a serious commitment, often involving sacrifices or service. David's vows are 'upon me' indicating binding obligation. 'I will render praises' shows that thanksgiving is not optional emotional response but covenant duty owed to God for deliverance.

Historical Context

Vows in ancient Israel were legally binding and made in contexts of crisis or petition. Failure to fulfill vows was serious sin (Ecclesiastes 5:4-6). David's vows likely included sacrifices and public testimony of God's deliverance once he became king.
