

Psalms 56:13

Authorized King James Version (KJV)

For thou hast delivered my soul from death: wilt not thou deliver my feet from falling, that I may walk before God in the light of the living?

Analysis

The question 'hast thou not delivered my soul from death?' is confident assertion, not doubt. Deliverance from death points beyond physical preservation to spiritual redemption. The purpose clause 'that I may walk before God in the light of the living' reveals that salvation's goal is covenant fellowship—walking in God's presence. This anticipates eternal life as knowing God (John 17:3).

Historical Context

David's deliverance from numerous death threats validated God's covenant promise to establish his throne. Walking 'in the light of the living' contrasts with Sheol's darkness, indicating life in God's favor as covenant blessing.
