

Psalm 60:3

Authorized King James Version (KJV)

Thou hast shewed thy people hard things: thou hast made us to drink the wine of astonishment.

Analysis

God showing His people 'hard things' indicates trials that test and refine. The wine of trembling/staggering depicts judgment that intoxicates—removing stability and clarity. Yet this comes from God's hand ('thou hast made us to drink'), distinguishing discipline from punishment. Believers may experience disorienting trials under God's sovereign purpose for sanctification.

Historical Context

The imagery of God's cup of wrath appears throughout Scripture (Isaiah 51:17, Jeremiah 25:15). Israel drinking this cup represented experiencing consequences of covenant unfaithfulness, yet as discipline within relationship, not ultimate rejection.
