

Psalms 66:2

Authorized King James Version (KJV)

Sing forth the honour of his name: make his praise glorious.

Analysis

---

The call to 'Sing forth the honour of his name' commands worship that exalts God's character. Making His praise 'glorious' indicates that worship's quality should match its object—God's infinite glory demands excellent praise. This anticipates John 4:24 where true worshipers worship in spirit and truth, showing that God deserves humanity's best.

Historical Context

This corporate call to worship reflects Israel's liturgical practice where a worship leader would call the assembly to praise. The imperative to make praise 'glorious' set standards for temple worship requiring musical excellence and theological depth.
