

Psalm 7:15

Authorized King James Version (KJV)

He made a pit, and digged it, and is fallen into the ditch which he made.

Analysis

The principle of retributive justice: the wicked trap themselves. The imagery of digging a pit and falling into it appears throughout wisdom literature (Proverbs 26:27, Ecclesiastes 10:8). This isn't karma but God's judicial ordering where sin contains its own judgment. The wicked's schemes ultimately backfire, demonstrating God's justice. Haman's gallows, Pharaoh's sea, and Satan's cross all illustrate this principle. It assures believers that evil will not ultimately triumph.

Historical Context

Pit traps were common hunting methods in ancient Israel. The imagery of falling into one's own trap would be immediately understood. This proverbial truth runs through Scripture - Joseph's brothers, Saul, Absalom all experienced this principle. It demonstrates God's providence in turning evil schemes to His purposes.
