

Psalms 71:19

Authorized King James Version (KJV)

Thy righteousness also, O God, is very high, who hast done great things: O God, who is like unto thee!

Analysis

Thy righteousness also, O God, is very high, who hast done great things: O God, who is like unto thee! After detailing God's faithfulness from youth to old age, David bursts into doxology. "Thy righteousness" (צִדְקָתְךָ/tzidqatekha) encompasses God's just character, right actions, and covenant faithfulness. "Very high" (עַד-מְרוֹם/ad-marom) literally means "unto the heights"—God's righteousness isn't merely good but transcendent, reaching to heaven itself, surpassing human measure.

"Who hast done great things" (אֲשֶׁר-עָשִׂיתָ גְּדוֹלוֹת/asher-asita gedolot) grounds praise in divine action. God's righteousness isn't abstract theological concept but lived reality demonstrated through mighty deeds of deliverance. The "great things" (gedolot) include all God's redemptive acts—exodus, conquest, David's own deliverance from Saul, victories over enemies, and ongoing preservation throughout life.

"O God, who is like unto thee?" (אֱלֹהִים מִי כָמוֹךָ/Elohim mi kamokhah) is rhetorical question expecting answer "no one." It echoes Moses's song after the Red Sea crossing: "Who is like unto thee, O LORD, among the gods? who is like thee, glorious in holiness, fearful in praises, doing wonders?" (Exodus 15:11). God's incomparability stems from His unique combination of transcendent holiness and immanent faithfulness.

Historical Context

Incomparability questions—"Who is like God?"—appear throughout Scripture as rhetorical devices establishing monotheism and God's uniqueness (Exodus 15:11, Deuteronomy 3:24, 2 Samuel 7:22, Psalm 35:10, 71:19, 89:6-8, 113:5, Micah 7:18). Ancient Near East was polytheistic, with gods ranked by power. Israel's radical claim was that Yahweh wasn't merely supreme among gods but uniquely God—incomparable, without rival or equal.

David's reflection on God's "great things" throughout his life (verses 1-18) climaxes here in worship. From youth (verse 5) through maturity to old age and gray hairs (verse 18), God proved faithful. This longitudinal perspective—decades of experienced faithfulness—undergirds confident worship.

Christian theology applies this incomparability to Christ. Paul writes that God "highly exalted him, and given him a name which is above every name" (Philippians 2:9). Revelation depicts heavenly worship asking, "Who is like unto thee?" regarding the Lamb (Revelation 15:4, echoing Exodus 15:11).
