

Psalm 72:14

Authorized King James Version (KJV)

He shall redeem their soul from deceit and violence: and precious shall their blood be in his sight.

Analysis

The king redeems lives 'from deceit and violence,' recognizing that the vulnerable face both fraud and force. 'Precious shall their blood be in his sight' affirms the high value God places on each person, especially the despised. Where the world views the poor as expendable, God sees them as precious. Christ demonstrated this by dying for sinners—those of no apparent worth became infinitely valuable through His sacrifice (Romans 5:8).

Historical Context

In ancient society, the poor's blood was cheap—they could be exploited or killed with little consequence. God's king inverts this, making even the lowliest person's life precious and worthy of protection.
