

Psalms 72:15

Authorized King James Version (KJV)

And he shall live, and to him shall be given of the gold of Sheba: prayer also shall be made for him continually; and daily shall he be praised.

Analysis

The king shall live, and people will give him gold of Sheba, pray for him continually, and daily praise him. This describes perpetual reign with ongoing tribute, intercession, and worship. The gold recalls the Queen of Sheba's gifts; the continual prayer suggests the king's dependence on divine help despite earthly power. Only Christ's eternal reign and the church's unceasing intercession (Hebrews 7:25) and praise fully satisfy this prophecy.

Historical Context

'He shall live' points to the king's longevity or, messianically, to Christ's resurrection and eternal life. Human kings die; the Son lives forever, making His priesthood and kingship permanent (Hebrews 7:24-25).
