

Psalms 73:11

Authorized King James Version (KJV)

And they say, How doth God know? and is there knowledge in the most High?

Analysis

The wicked ask, 'How doth God know? and is there knowledge in the most High?' This questions God's omniscience and moral governance. If God doesn't know or care about injustice, they can act wickedly without consequence. This practical atheism denies divine oversight even while giving lip service to God's existence. Yet 'the eyes of the LORD run to and fro throughout the whole earth' (2 Chronicles 16:9); nothing escapes His notice or ultimate justice.

Historical Context

This question echoes the fool's claim 'There is no God' (Psalm 14:1)—not theoretical atheism but practical godlessness. People live as if God doesn't see or won't judge, enabling moral chaos.
