

Psalms 74:10

Authorized King James Version (KJV)

O God, how long shall the adversary reproach? shall the enemy blaspheme thy name for ever?

Analysis

The psalmist pleads: "O God, how long shall the adversary reproach? shall the enemy blaspheme thy name for ever?" (Hebrew ad-matay Elohim y-charef tzar y-na'etz oyev shim-kha la-netzach). "How long" is lament's persistent question—not doubting God's ability but seeking His timing. "Adversary" and "enemy" blaspheme not just Israel but God's name. The duration ("forever") expresses felt perpetuity, though faith knows God will act. The verse makes God's honor, not merely Israel's welfare, the basis for petition.

Historical Context

Babylonian victory was interpreted as divine conquest—Marduk over Yahweh. This "blasphemy" of God's name was intolerable. Ezekiel 36:20-23 explains God must vindicate His name among nations. The "how long" cry appears throughout lament psalms (13:1, 35:17, 89:46) and finds ultimate answer in Revelation 6:10-11—martyrs ask "how long" until judgment, receiving white robes and promise of soon vindication.

Study Questions

1. When you ask "how long, O God," how do you balance honest lament with patient trust?
2. How does framing prayer around God's blasphemed name (not just personal suffering) change your perspective?
3. In what ways does Christ's vindication at resurrection answer the "how long" cry for God's name to be honored?
