

Psalms 74:17

Authorized King James Version (KJV)

Thou hast set all the borders of the earth: thou hast made summer and winter.

Analysis

The psalm continues creation theology: "Thou hast set all the borders of the earth: thou hast made summer and winter" (Hebrew atah hitzavta kol-g-vulot eretz qayitz va-choref atah y-tzartam). "Set borders" indicates God's sovereign establishment of geographical and natural boundaries. "Made" (Hebrew yatzar) is the potter's forming—deliberate creative shaping. The seasonal cycle demonstrates ongoing providential governance. The verse argues: God who orders all creation can certainly reorder the chaos of Israel's destruction.

Historical Context

The seasonal cycle was crucial for agricultural societies yet mysterious—pagan religions credited fertility gods (Baal, etc.). This psalm insists the LORD alone controls seasons, growth, and harvest. Job 38-41 similarly uses creation to establish God's wisdom and power. Acts 14:17 applies this: God's provision of "seasons and fruitful years" testifies to His goodness toward all people.

Study Questions

1. How do regular natural cycles (seasons, sunrise/sunset) testify to God's faithful governance?
2. In what ways does recognizing God's sovereignty over "all borders" address anxiety about chaos and disorder?
3. How does Christ's calming the storm demonstrate His divine authority over creation (Mark 4:39)?
