

Psalms 77:14

Authorized King James Version (KJV)

Thou art the God that doest wonders: thou hast declared thy strength among the people.

Analysis

The psalmist declares: "Thou art the God that doest wonders: thou hast declared thy strength among the people" (Hebrew atah ha-El oseh fele hit-hoda va-amim uzzekha). "Doest wonders" (Hebrew oseh fele) emphasizes God's miraculous interventions—works that transcend natural causation. "Declared thy strength" indicates that God's mighty acts reveal His character and power to nations. Miracles serve theological purpose: manifesting God's reality and authority. The verse moves from personal faith (vv.1-12) to confessional proclamation (vv.13-20).

Historical Context

The primary "wonders" reference the Exodus miracles: plagues, Red Sea crossing, manna, water from rock. These weren't merely impressive displays but revelatory acts making God known to nations (Exodus 9:16, 15:14-16). Joshua 2:9-11 records Canaanites' terror at hearing of God's works. The New Testament applies this: Christ's miracles manifested His glory (John 2:11).

Study Questions

1. How do God's past "wonders" (both biblical and personal) strengthen present faith?
2. In what ways does God intend His mighty works to be "declared among the people"—what is your role in this?
3. How do Christ's miracles supremely reveal God's character, and how does the resurrection surpass all other wonders?
