

Psalms 78:34

Authorized King James Version (KJV)

When he slew them, then they sought him: and they returned and enquired early after God.

Analysis

When he slew them, then they sought him: and they returned and enquired early after God. The Hebrew hārag (הָרַג, "slew") describes God's judicial execution through plague or judgment, triggering superficial repentance. The verb shāḥar (שָׁחַר, "enquired early") means to seek earnestly at dawn, suggesting urgency born from crisis rather than genuine devotion. This pattern reveals foxhole religion—turning to God only when death threatens.

The cycle exposes Israel's perpetual spiritual amnesia: prosperity breeds complacency, judgment sparks panic-prayer, deliverance leads back to complacency. Their seeking was reactive self-preservation, not covenant faithfulness. Asaph chronicles this tragic pattern to warn his own generation against repeating their fathers' hypocrisy.

This verse anticipates the New Covenant promise of transformed hearts (Jeremiah 31:33), since mere external crisis cannot produce lasting repentance. Only the Spirit's work creates seekers who pursue God in prosperity and adversity alike (John 4:23-24).

Historical Context

This refers to incidents during the wilderness wanderings when God judged Israel's rebellion—the plague after the golden calf (Exodus 32:35), Korah's rebellion (Numbers 16:49), and the fiery serpents (Numbers 21:6). Each judgment temporarily restored fearful compliance, but hearts remained unchanged.
