

Psalms 78:57

Authorized King James Version (KJV)

But turned back, and dealt unfaithfully like their fathers: they were turned aside like a deceitful bow.

Analysis

But turned back, and dealt unfaithfully like their fathers: they were turned aside like a deceitful bow. The phrase turned back (vayyisogu achor, וַיַּיְסֹגּוּ אַחֹר) describes retreat from covenant commitment, not merely stumbling but deliberate desertion. Dealt unfaithfully (vayivgadu, וַיִּיבְגְדוּ) uses the language of marital treachery—Israel played the harlot with other gods (Hosea 1-3).

Like their fathers indicts generational sin patterns. Despite witnessing God's mighty acts, each generation repeated its fathers' faithlessness, proving that spiritual life doesn't transmit genetically—every generation needs new birth (John 3:3-7). The continuity of rebellion demonstrates the depravity of the human heart apart from grace.

The simile like a deceitful bow (nehepchu kekeshet remiyyah, נֶהֱפְכוּ כֶּקֶשֶׁת רֵמִיָּיָה) is devastating. A warped bow looks functional but shoots arrows crooked, making it worse than useless—dangerous. Israel appeared to be God's weapon against paganism but instead proved unreliable, missing the target. Only Jesus is the true arrow shot straight to accomplish God's purposes (Isaiah 49:2).

Historical Context

Asaph likely wrote during increasing apostasy in the Northern Kingdom under Jeroboam's golden calf worship (1 Kings 12:25-33) or later syncretistic practices.

The 'fathers' reference recalls the wilderness generation's unbelief (Numbers 14) and subsequent judges-era cycles of idolatry.
