

Psalm 81:9

Authorized King James Version (KJV)

There shall no strange god be in thee; neither shalt thou worship any strange god.

Analysis

There shall no strange god be in thee (לא־יִהְיֶה בְּךָ אֱלֹהִים זֶר) — El zar (foreign, strange god) echoes the First Commandment (Exodus 20:3) and the Shema (Deuteronomy 6:4). The preposition in thee emphasizes internal allegiance, not just external idols. Neither shalt thou worship any strange god — the prohibition extends from heart (possessing) to practice (bowing down).

This verse stands at the psalm's theological center: God delivered Israel from Egypt specifically to be their exclusive God (Exodus 20:2-3). Idolatry wasn't merely breaking a rule but covenant adultery, rejecting the Husband who redeemed His bride. The New Testament intensifies this: covetousness is idolatry (Colossians 3:5), and 'you cannot serve God and money' (Matthew 6:24).

Historical Context

Despite this clear command, Israel's history is a catalog of idolatry: the golden calf (Exodus 32), Baal worship (Judges-Kings), and syncretism that ultimately caused exile. The very generation delivered from Egypt fell into idolatry within weeks (Exodus 32). The prophets consistently diagnosed Israel's political and moral failures as rooted in broken allegiance to Yahweh.

Study Questions

1. What 'strange gods' (money, approval, comfort, success) compete for the allegiance God demands exclusively?
2. How does idolatry function as spiritual adultery against the God who 'married' His people in covenant?
3. Why is external religious observance insufficient if internal affections are divided among multiple 'gods'?
