

Psalms 92:2

Authorized King James Version (KJV)

To shew forth thy lovingkindness in the morning, and thy faithfulness every night,

Analysis

The bipartite structure of morning 'lovingkindness' (hesed) and evening 'faithfulness' (emunah) reflects God's covenant attributes that sustain believers throughout each day. This pattern teaches that meditation on God's character should bookend our daily activities. The Hebrew hesed encompasses loyal love, mercy, and covenant faithfulness—a rich theological concept central to understanding God's relationship with His people.

Historical Context

The morning and evening pattern corresponds to the daily sacrifices (tamid) offered in the temple, creating a rhythm of worship that sanctified all of time.
